

February 27, 2014

Hello!

Another day of great visits to the homes of sponsored children! Each home is different from the next. It's great for the team members to share with one another their different experiences. They also continued working on their various projects.

Our CGA widows made some beautiful items and brought them to school to sell to our visitors. They enjoyed doing some shopping, buying local items they won't find at craft/souvenir shops in Nairobi and appreciated knowing all the money was going back to the widows.

In the afternoon, nearly everyone ventured into town to experience Market Day. It wasn't about buying stuff but mostly for the experience. Attached is a picture of Diane inside our little "super market" in Mbita. They all gained a new appreciation for American stores like Target and WalMart; the well laid-out, organized stores where everything is under one roof! :-)

Another great day full of new experiences. Tomorrow's their final day at CGA and in Mbita. Goodbyes are important in Kenyan culture and it'll likely be an emotional day for many of the team who have grown to deeply love their sponsored child, CGA and Mbita.

Pray for a joy-filled day full of sweet and special moments and conversations!!!

Everyone's in good health; including JoAnn. A bit tired as they endure the long and very hot days. But nonetheless, feeling good!!!!

Blessings from Mbita,
Daneen